Abstract

Many people surrender to the modern fast pace of life, placing their health and body second to societal demands. This is a pity since with a daily routine of 30 minutes of running, one can contribute to his/her health, be more productive and eliminate daily stress. By introducing runners with proper incentives (competition and achievements) to conduct along with fitness activity, alongside with the ability to see their progress as well as socialize, they can feel more accomplished and motivated to exercise. Hence, potential and current runners will find running an enjoyable necessity, and improvement in life.
